Cropping an image with the Crop tool You can use the Crop tool to quickly crop images. If you've already scaled the image to fit the layout, the Crop tool crops the image vertically (to make it taller) or horizontally (to make it wider) from the edge of the original image layer. To crop the image, simply drag the cropping line over the image or press Enter (Return on a Mac) on the keyboard. To crop all the way around an image, drag the line over the edge of the image and

Elements might be a good starting point for people who want to learn graphic design or make high quality memes. However, if you're looking for comprehensive photo editing power or anything beyond the basics, you'll be better off with Photoshop. Design Design In Photoshop Design is probably the most important thing in Photoshop. You will be designing logos, websites, and illustrations for thousands of dollars. If you are using Photoshop for design, then you will want to know every part of the program. The most important part for designers are the tools that make their life easier. A good practice is to learn the shortcuts (shortcuts make a designer's life so much easier). The shortcuts you learn will take a lot of time and effort to memorize. But once you learn them, you won't want to go back to using old methods. For instance, the PS tools command to create a marquee type selection box is Shift+M. Open up the Select menu, and click the marquee box. Now click the photo and you have your selection box. You can create any selection boxes you want and then easily select parts of the photo as you work. Another shortcut that many designers use is to create a gradient. This is done by holding the Alt key and clicking and dragging in the image. Once you do that, you can grab a gradient tool and apply it to a new layer. You can even create different types of gradients. You can also quickly create any kind of logo. Create a circle then drag it around the canvas. Copy the path, and then delete the end points. Press Enter to create the outline. Then click the Brush tool, and start painting in the shape you want. A lot of people don't even realize that you can make simple shapes with the Brush tool. Using the Eraser tool, or one of its clones like the clone stamp, is also a great way to create vector graphics. You can change the brush size and opacity to do just about anything. Another easy way to create any basic shape is to use the Pen tool. Click and drag, draw, and you have a new shape. You can even create a freeform shape and smooth the edges. The majority of the tools in Photoshop are similar. A good resource for learning the tools is the Lynda. 388ed7b0c7

Boston eliminates parking in front of Logan Airport terminals - pseudolus ===== s_y_n_t_a_x I live in Boston, and while I'm all for efficiency and what not, I still find this approach fails at accomplishing the purpose. The cost is also nuts. It's not just the $85 for every parking spot they'll be moving, it's also the fact that parking spots are going to be scarce anyway. I'd rather see a combination of structured parking, and no parking at all in this area. ~~~ gizmo686 The cost is if anything is in the negatives for the airport: Instead of the prices being almost guaranteed, the city is guaranteeing the pricing. This means that they are effectively giving away the parking when doing so will increase the total revenue from the airport. With a $85 fee, the airport can up and leave, much like a parking garage, with the cost being absorbed by the city. ~~~ s_y_n_t_a_x That's true, but if it was the case that the price was so high as to (reasonably) lose the revenue to the airport, I would rather have a parking lot style structure ~~~ kekub And I can imagine other corporations that make money with parking lots. ~~~ s_y_n_t_a_x Yea, that's the problem with having the city pay for this ----- mdorazio Based on the same idea, I've seen a small program with similar outcomes in Pittsburgh, PA [1]. While the first set of data shows an immediate drop in parking space when the program was implemented, looking more recently it's encouraging to see declines in parking occupancy. I work in the city's data center and use the city-provided transit cards and ride the light rail system just to get from my office in downtown to the Data Center (in a suburb 2 miles away). It's crazy expensive and adds zero value in a lot of cases, but I suppose at
